TOC Board Says No to City Transit Proposal

The Outdoor Circle Board of Directors has determined that it cannot support construction of the Honolulu rail transit project as currently proposed. TOC's concerns were explained in comments provided to the City regarding the Draft Environmental Impact Statement—the DEIS. That document is supposed to objectively present all of the project's impacts and describe measures to mitigate those impacts on the community. TOC's analysis of the DEIS found that it did neither in sufficient detail for the organization to support the project.

"After three years of meetings, hearings, analysis, field trips and consultation with experts on both sides of the issue, we were left with the conclusion that this project will cause irreparable damage to our scenic environment," said CEO Mary Steiner.

Of greatest concern is the impacts that the above ground fixed guide way and more than two dozen huge elevated transit stations will have on the view planes and overall character of the communities through which the transit project would run. TOC also has serious problems regarding the removal of more than 800 street trees with no specific plans presented for relocations or replanting.

"The city's contractor says some of the trees will be replanted but failed to say where and when this would be done," said Steiner, "and that is not

The DEIS states that the transit project's most serious impacts will be felt from downtown area to Ala Moana Center the level of detail necessary to satisfy our members or the community."

In the end TOC's board believes that the elevated transit system will create too much damage to the visual environment of our island and recommends that the city pursue an alternative plan.

Legislature Kills Campaign Sign Reform Mobile Billboard Ban Still Alive

The Hawaii Legislature has again said "No" to TOC's attempt to restrict the community eyesore created by excessive campaign signs. The proposal would have eliminated big banners and signs and imposed limits that would eliminate the large numbers of campaign signs on any single property. It was a total defeat for the proposed legislation. Neither the House nor the Senate would hold a hearing on the bill.

On the positive side, the effort to close a loophole in Hawaii's mobile advertising law has cleared several hurdles and appears to have strong support. Under the legislation businesses would be allowed to display their own name and/or products on their vehicles, but could not be paid to display ads for others. If passed, the measure will ban so-called "truckside billboards" which are starting to appear on vehicles across Hawai'i.

Annual Meeting Set

We hope you will join us for brunch at the Annual Spring General Membership meeting on Saturday May 16 at 9:30 AM at the historic Wai'oli Tea Room in Manoa Valley. The Tea Room is situated in a lush green landscape that is the perfect setting for a gathering of Outdoor Circle members. Details about the meeting as well as the 2009-2010 slate of officers and proxy information is found on pages 4, 5 and 6 of Greenleaf.

President's Message

As we step into Spring, 2009, it's time to wake up to the lively new growth around us.

The financial picture at TOC is strong, even in these times that test our resourcefulness on all levels. We've had ongoing competent financial advisors and a Board willing to take informed action, so we stand robust and able to fulfill our mission to the Hawaiian community.

Our efforts at membership growth continue unabated as we reach out into new communities, such as Kapolei and old communities, such as Hilo.

TOC is an ongoing presence at the legislature, where bills affecting our objectives are monitored and sometimes designed by us.

Cooperative activities with state entities and the City and County continue as we get ever more trees into the ground. Following the guidelines of our Strategic Plan, we have a clear course ahead and inspired leaders to get us there.

For my part, it has been an honor to serve as President for these past two years, well supported by staff and members and I am excited about the new leadership coming onboard.

Spring 2009 has come and the earth renews itself. We at The Outdoor Circle, follow suit.

With Warm Aloha,
Betsy Connors

TOC Working to Save H-1 Trees

The Outdoor Circle appears to be winning a protracted fight to save several mature Monkey Pod and Shower Trees along the mauka side of the H-1 freeway at School Street near downtown. The Department of Transportation must repair the freeway's retaining wall and in the process initially called for removing the trees planted in the embankment.

TOC and volunteer arborist Abner Undan inspected the site and concluded that the trees do not pose a threat to the retaining wall and should remain in place. TOC argued that the H-1 cannot afford to lose the few mature trees that soften the hard urban landscape in that area. DOT has since revisited its plans and now agrees that it does not have to sacrifice the trees to complete the necessary work.

Waimanalo Blues

Nearly two-hundred Ironwood Trees have been removed from two Waimanalo area beach parks. The removals were ordered after the trees were assessed as being hazardous following a damaging wind storm in December 2008. Many of the trees reached their dreadful and dangerous condition after being repeatedly burned by park users who dumped hot charcoal at their bases. Honolulu urban forestry officials say charcoal burns are a major cause of damage that results in trees being removed from Honolulu's parks.

The trees were removed from Waimanalo Beach Park and Waimanalo Bay Park, known to most residents as Sherwood Forest. Concern for the condition of trees in these parks was first raised when a large, mature Ironwood was uprooted and overturned on the edge of the beach. That event triggered an assessment of all trees in both parks which determined that many trees were unsafe and needed to be removed.

TOC IN ACTION

Waikiki Signs

New, slightly relaxed sign rules have been approved for Waikiki after TOC and the Waikiki Improvement Association spent nearly two years ironing out the details. TOC believes the rules are fair to businesses, helpful to the public and do not compromise our decades-old stance against inappropriate signage.

Waikiki business owners and the Honolulu City Council have voiced their appreciation for TOC's flexibility and willingness to tackle the potentially thorny issues.

Native Hawaiian Site

TOC in conjunction with the Department of Transportation has consulted with Native Hawaiian advocates regarding trees at the site of an ancient Hawaiian settlement adjacent to the H-3 freeway. The site was discovered during construction of the H-3 and its rehabilitation was ordered as part of the H-3 environmental mitigation.

The site contains remnants of lava rock terraces, some of which are being destroyed by large trees.

Kailua Trees Protected

The beloved Kamani Trees that line Kailua Road have been saved. Nearly three years ago TOC and project arborist Steve Nimz examined each tree to determine what would be required to protect them from road repair work. During those inspections it was learned that four defective trees would have to be removed. On the positive side, it was determined that Kailua Road is wide enough for the city to move the curbs away from the trees and into the roadway, thus saving the remaining trees from relocation or removal.

Diamond Head Trees

The Outdoor Circle is consulting with the Department of Land and Natural Resource about the future of two old Kiawe Trees along the entry to Diamond Head State Monument. The trees are destroying part of the historic wall along the road entering the park. Possible solutions involve rebuilding part of the wall or removing the trees. If that happens replacement trees will be planted in the same area.

Kilauea Avenue Trees

TOC is actively involved in monitoring the road work along Kilauea Ave which threatens the stand of beautiful

Monkey Pod trees that line the median. The work is necessary, in part, because of damage to the road caused by the roots of the big trees. The City has pledged to perform the work while protecting the trees and TOC is frequently inspecting the project to make certain that pledge is followed.

Iolani Palace Trees

More than a half dozen Coconut Trees have been removed from the grounds of Iolani Palace after a large Coconut Tree fell into King Street earlier this year. After that incident all of the Palace trees were assessed. Several were determined to be hazardous and were removed. To date the Palace has not replaced the trees despite the fact that replacements are required because the Palace lies within a City Special Design District. TOC is pushing the State to obey that law.
